Newport Horse Show Delayed; Opens To-day

Heavy Rains Over Week End Causes Postponement, First in Its History; Vanderbilt Dinner Is Given

Tennis Play Held Up Also

Society Purchases Many Boxes for Net Tourney; Mrs. J. J. Brown Arrives

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 28.—Mr. Reginald C. Vanderbilt's annual horse show dinner, given in the horse show ring of his Sandy Point Farm this evening, was the feature of to-day's entertainments. There were forty-six men guests present, including the Newport horse show committee, the judges and the exhibitors, all of whom found Mr. Vanderbilt much improved after his attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which kept him confined to his residence the last week. The dinner was conducted along the same elaborate lines as in other years. Among the exhibitors at the dinner were Mr. Franklin B. Jordan, Mr. R. R. Carpenter, Mr. John R. K. Scott, Mr. George Crouth, Mr. Moses Taylor, Mr. Sidney A. Beggs, Dr. Thomas G. Ashton and Mr. Benjamin Leslie Behr.

For the first time in the history of the Newport horse show the opening had to be postponed, because of the condition of the ring after a record-breaking fall of rain over the week end. Mr. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, chairman of the executive committee, made the decision to postpone the opening until to-morrow when there was no indication of a decrease in the precipitation this morning. The show will now be held in two days instead of Wednesday, at 1:30 instead of 3 o'clock.

Tennis Games Also Delayed

Rain to-day also interfered with the starting of the tennis tournaments, in which members of the Spanish team and other tennis stars will team with the ranking world players and the sprinkling of the summer colony. Mrs. Barger Wallace, chairman of the committee which is handling these tournaments, made every effort to have them started this afternoon, and waited in vain for a diminution of rain to start on the clay courts, which are always available for play.

The Tribune Fresh Air Fund

Claremont, N. H., Hosts Send Children Home With Loads of "Loot," Embraces and Kisses, and the Youngsters Want to Remain There

Fresh Air children finish two weeks in Claremont.

Tears at parting from foster parents. Loads of loot pack little arms. This is the headline "The Claremont (N. H.) Eagle" gave its Fresh Air story a few days ago. And here's the story that followed:

"If you had seen the Fresh Air children come in from New York two weeks ago and then had seen them depart this morning on the return trip, you would have said there was some difference, yes! For they came all happy anticipation, with smiles for everybody."

"They went back tearful, sad, willing to stay in the country forever if only it could be arranged. Some of them were consoled by the thought of seeing parents once more, but more of them seemed quite willing to retain the foster parents they had acquired in Claremont."

Sorrow at Parting

"And the foster parents were as sad and doleful to have the children go as the children were to leave them. Not one was found who felt that burden was being laid down. Embraces and kisses were heartily exchanged between the little travelers and their foster mothers, and one such mother actually succeeded in getting her little charge for an extra week."

"It was a long train that took them away, with special cars filled with towns and cities north and south of the same general tale was heard."

"The children were burdened with loads of flowers, toys, dolls and other treasures they have assembled while here. Some even had real Claremont money."

"How much money you carryin' home?" one boy said to another.

"Fifty cents," said the proud lad.

"Fifty cents? That's nothing! I got a dollar thirty!" cried tied up in my hankerchief."

Opening of S. P. C. C. New Home Discloses Modern Institution

Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Heckscher Has Every Facility for Care, Instruction, Entertainment of Juveniles

The new home of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, with vastly improved facilities for the care, instruction and entertainment of its juvenile charges, was opened yesterday. It is an eight-story building at Fifth Avenue and 105th Street, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. August Heckscher.

They have established also the August Heckscher Foundation for the Care of Runaway Children, the offices of which are in the same building.

The children were delighted with their new quarters, even to Gabriele Rizzo, who has spent the last five of his nine years in a tenement. For he has found only bewildering confusion in the world since he left his cell. Gabriele can speak only a few words, and those Italian. He uses a limited vocabulary but seldom and seems to be in a continual state.

The swimming and wading pools, the juvenile theater seating 800, the marvelous dormitories with animals marching around the walls, and all the other strange sights of the new building impressed Gabriele not at all, but Poutch did.

"Poutch is an Alaskan dog which goes with the new building and Gabriele flung himself down at the animal's side with an adoring smile—his first since his release. If not his first in five years, it was as such as he caught sight of the furry creature."

Poutch smiled too and the pair have been inseparable. Even the call to dinner fails to separate them. The first time, Gabriele is taking an interest in life.

There are playrooms and schoolrooms in the new building and rooms in which special clinics are conducted for the treatment of eyes, ears, nose, feet or any other children members found to be afflicted. There is a gymnasium also in which hundreds of children may exercise at once without crowding it.
